What is a degree certification?

An officially certified copy must contain a verification, stating that the copy matches the original document. The certification does not attest to the authenticity or validity of the document presented, only that the original and the copy match in terms of content.

Otto-von-Guericke University Magdeburg is only allowed to certify its own university degrees and documents (according to §33 (1) of the German Administrative Procedures Act (Verwaltungsverfahrensgesetz)).

Other documents such as copies of identity cards, passports, birth/marriage certificates, or high school certificates cannot be certified if they were not issued by the Otto-von-Guericke University.

The formal requirements for an official certification are taken from §33 of either the German Federal or State Administrative Procedure Acts.
